FOOD INTOLERANCE TEST

Food intolerance refers to the difficulty in digesting certain foods, which may produce a variety of symptoms including lethargy, bloating, stomach pain, weight control problems and headaches. The symptoms of food intolerance can be delayed for many hours or even days. The Food Intolerance test, which we offer is a very good test, that was developed and manufactured by DST Diagnostic in Germany; it detects antibodies to 59 different foods. The test consists of an assay device, that has been spotted with specially prepared extracts from different foods. We would need to take a blood sample through a simple finger prick; dilute it and transfer it into the assay device, to allow any antibodies that recognize the foods that bind to them. In this way, the foods causing antibody production in the patient can be identified. You will have the result in just one hour.

GUT CARE SERVICES

MICROBIOME TEST

The human gut hosts a highly complex ecosystem of micro-organisms. The presence and activity of micro-organisms are the foundation of the body's health and well-being. A microbiome test analyses the state of the individual's gut flora and determines any imbalances. The understanding of the gut's microbiome gives an insight into the individual's microbial self, and in return gives the opportunity to maintain and/or modulate toward balanced well-being. The intestinal microbiome is considered as a true 'brain' and is an essential player in the onset or recurrence of many diseases, both related to the intestines and other organs. The process is simple, painless, and straightforward. Advanced and innovative laboratory technologies are used to process and assess the sample to issue a personalised report indicating changes needed to restore the physiological balance of the microbial community.

COELIAC TEST

Coeliac disease is a serious condition where the immune system attacks its own tissues, in the small intestines following the consumption of gluten. Coeliac disease runs in families and occurs in genetically predisposed individuals. Brown's offers 2 different tests:

HLA Coeliac Test

The Human Leukocyte Antigen (HLA) test for coeliac disease, is a test that through a saliva sample assesses the individual's genetic predisposition to develop the disease. The HLA test is a genetic test used to confirm or exclude the possibility of coeliac disease, it determines if an individual carries the gene for coeliac disease, thus having a greater risk to develop the condition.

When is the test indicated?

- Children and adults who are 1st degree relatives of someone with coeliac disease.
- Individuals experiencing symptoms related to coeliac disease such as; persistent unexplained gastrointestinal symptoms such as feeling sick and being sick, unintentional weight loss, fatigue, unintentional weight loss.
